Why is it needed?

The complex nature of employment laws means that companies face employment-related risks on a daily basis. Changes to the laws affecting the employer/employee dynamic together with employees becoming increasingly aware of their rights mean that companies need to ensure that they keep up to date with changes to legislation and regularly review and update internal procedures.

For businesses of any size, employment related claims represent a potentially damaging and negative exposure both financially and reputationally.

The company may face claims from past, present or prospective employees as well as other individuals who benefit from workplace protections. These can include wrongful termination claims, breach of employment contract and claims arising from allegations of discrimination and harassment.

Dealing with and defending such claims can be financially punishing and time consuming, distracting the directors and managers from performing their day to day tasks to the potential detriment of the company.

Why Travelers?

Employment Practices Liability Insurance offers comprehensive liability cover to protect businesses against claims made by employees and covers the whole company, including subsidiaries.

Travelers' insurance covers the legal costs and expenses of defending these allegations of wrongdoing, as well as the payment of compensation awarded for a wide range of employment practice violations including unfair dismissal or discrimination on grounds of sex, race, disability, religion, belief or sexual orientation.

Our specialist policy for private companies provides comprehensive financial protection against this increasingly common type of litigation.
